DOCUMENTARY FILM

Otra Cosa No Hay/There is Nothing Else (2014). This film explores the roles that law, politics and protest play in local communities when its gold attracts the attention of foreign mining companies, and, immediately after, becomes a cause célèbre of environmental activists aiming to protect its water from mining-related contamination.

WEBSITE

Otra Cosa No Hay/There is Nothing Else (2014). This website provides an online home for the trailer and other information about the documentary film by the same name.

WORKS IN PROGRESS

Intransigence, Transition, and Transformation: Natural Resources and Conflict under Latin America's Modern Constitutions (forthcoming) This chapter explores the transformative potential of the environmental and human rights protections now embedded in international and domestic law, including modern constitutions and observes that these legal provisions are regularly in conflict with the international and domestic law protecting international natural resource investments.

Contracts in the Heartland: this full-length article will survey the contracts and controversies that have arisen in Indiana with respect to the large-scale windfarms built, particularly, in Central Indiana, since 2010.

Rethinking the Role of Law in Development: Field research and filming leading to a documentary film and diverse publications on current development initiatives, focusing on successful governance instruments employed by communities struggling to exact the best possible outcomes for the local recipients of natural resource extraction projects.
